TELLS WOMEN TO GET AWAY FROM OLD FORMULA AND BECOME INTERESTED IN SPECIFIC PROBLEMS

Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Secretary of Commonwealth, Speaker at Luncheon of Bucks County Republican Women — C. H. Backus Also Makes Address About State Highway Department's Accomplishments.

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 6.—Politics and civilian defense were discussed intelligently yesterday by speakers at the noon-day luncheon of the Bucks County Council of Republican Women.

Pennsylvania's first woman Cabinet member, Secretary of the Commonwealth Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, of Luzerne county, said that there is not a field of legislation that does not affect women.

"Let's get away from the old formula of yesterday," she declared, "and realize the time has arrived to become interested in specific problems."

Miss O'Hara declared "the necessity of getting away from symbols and glittering generalities is here."

"As women it is time to get away from the habit of condemning a thing because some other person says it should be condemned," she said. "As women, let's demand the facts."

"On December 8 last we closed an era of self-delusion and now we have been compelled to enter the era of objective thinking. We no longer live in the world of wishful thinking and it is our business now to find it out quicker than our enemies do."

Miss O'Hara emphasized the importance of preserving the two-party political system in the United States in order to "save ourselves from a one-man government."

"When at war we must recognize certain differences of political parties," she said, "but we must never compromise the two parties, unless it be for emergency purposes only. If we do away with the two-party system, the American way of life will be gone."

"Don't forget there is a group of men and women in the country today who are thinking in a new form of one-man government, because they realize the great power that it gives."

"From the political standpoint this is an important year for elections in Pennsylvania, including the office of Governor. It is doubly important because."

WELL-KNOWN ARTISTS SETTLE AT SPRINGTOWN

Grace and Percy Albee With Their Family of Boys Enjoy Bucks Co. Home

TELL OF PARISIAN LIFE

SPRINGTOWN, Mar. 6.—Grace and Percy Albee, well-known in the world of art, have taken up their residence in Bucks County. The two, who heard about Bucks County's art colony during their residence in Paris as the World War II plans were materializing, are living here now.

Mr. Albee is a nephew of the late Edward F. Albee, of Keith-Albee Theatre fame, and Mrs. Albee is a direct descendant of Roger Williams, the early American colonist.

Both have attained recognition as versatile artists in not only the museums and exhibitions of America, but in the salons of Europe as well. After having lived in Paris and other European cities for six years, they came back to this country with a greater appreciation for their homeland. Like many students and mature painters, they were somewhat disillusioned by the way French dealers and critics treat art.

"You can win the Legion of Honor," said Mr. Albee, "if you have 3,000 francs. And it will cost you more if you have more to spend. When I got so far that I knew prizes in painting there could be gotten that way, I lost interest. It was too sticky. Here in the United States they go to the other extreme, often making it a snooty and stuffy affair. I think the American"

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Demands for "protection at once" have come from 170 NYA clients on an island shelled by the enemy and we are loaning our spurs to Aubrey Williams.

We were more surprised than the enemy to find them there.

The NYA has $151,000,000 this year to help cloistered youth complete its thesis on "the decadence of capitalism" at Backwash U., or fit it for industry.

There was no college and no industry except one lighthouse on the island and we have no information as to what the 170 semi-pro youths were doing there.

However we have a dandy idea on protection for them. We have a department called "army" and another called "navy" which just happened to be on the lookout for bright young men.

The work is a little harder than NYA but both departments supply protection equipment and no ex-NYA need fear that he will be caught with a third reader of a daffodil in his hand when the enemy comes over.

Thought for the day: Are we youths or are we yerks?

LATEST WAR BULLETINS

"Japs" at Standstill in Philippines

Washington—The War Department today reported that the Japanese war effort in the Philippines is at a virtual standstill, and that the enemy, evidently in fear of a "popular uprising," has ordered all natives on the islands to surrender their bolos and other weapons.

The War Department's communique credited General MacArthur's surprise air raid of March 4 on Subic Bay with having disrupted the enemy's plan for a renewal of the offensive on Batan.

Intimation of a possible native uprising was based on a Japanese army order directing Filipinos in occupied areas "to surrender guns and blade weapons of every description, including ornamental and utilitarian knives and trophies."

Asks Debt Limit Raise

Washington—Declaring that the astronomical figures "should frighten no one but our enemies," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau today asked Congress to raise the legal limit of the national debt from $65,000,000,000 to $125,000,000,000 or face the prospect of no more Federal borrowing after this month.

The plea was made before the House Ways and Means Committee which has been debating Morgenthau's proposal that lower and middle income taxes be doubled as part of his program to increase Federal revenues by $7,610,000,000.

Warning today that despite sharply increased tax burdens most of the war still must be paid for by borrowing, the Secretary said the present debt limit will be reached next month and that Uncle Sam will owe $70,000,000,000 next June 30 and $11,400,000,000 a year from then.

"While these figures are huge in amount, they are made necessary by the great task to which Congress and the American people have dedicated themselves, namely, the task of winning this war," Morgenthau declared.

"Whatever the cost may be we are ready to face it. We are strong enough to bear it, and we know that it will be worth it in the end."

"Japs" Hold Western Java

Bandung—Virtually all of Western Java is now in Japanese hands, the Dutch high command announced today, practically conceding the loss of Batavia, the capital.

(Note: John D. Bouwer, CBS and Aneta correspondent in Bandung, reported by radio that all Dutch troops have now evacuated Batavia.)

On the basis of official information, the Netherlands East Indies news service, Aneta, said:

"Practically all of Western Java is now occupied by the Japanese and the Netherlands Indies forces have withdrawn to new positions."

"Batavia has either been occupied or will shortly be taken. All important installations in the city had been destroyed in advance and many persons were evacuated to the interior."

"It was believed the main war action would develop around Bandung, temporary capital and headquarters of the army." Heavy artillery fire was heard in Bandung this afternoon, indicating the close approach of enemy forces.

Earlier, the high command admitted that the Japanese had made new gains everywhere and by virtue of greatly superior numbers had "worn down" the courageous defenders of Java.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Have We A Boiling Point?

Washington, March 5.

IT is not easy to gauge the reaction of the American people in politics and public affairs. Sometimes they will swallow complacently things that should make them boil with indignation. At others they will boil with indignation over relatively little things. They would boil over more often if there were time and opportunity to obtain and digest all the facts.

EARLY in the Roosevelt regime Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, in a Los Angeles speech, urged a political alliance between the factory laborer and the farmer with which, he contended, business could be relegated to the rear and the country more or less permanently be-run by the advocates of the good, the pure and the beautiful, of whom he was one. To a large extent, New Deal politics have been based on that principle. Its main appeal has been to these two classes, which have been greatly favored at the expense of the people as a whole.

WHETHER the New Deal politicians showed the farm and labor lobbyists the mutual advantages of co-operation or whether they themselves saw the logic of combining these two powerful pressure groups, the fact remains that the farm lobby and the labor lobby have worked together for eight years. Each has played the other's game, usually with White House support. As a result, the American people have been hornsawed, whipsawed, double-crossed and two-timed in an unprecedented and thoroughly outrageous way.

THIS was bad enough in peace times, but with the nation fighting

Young Man In Service Enjoys Home-Town Paper

Private First Class Anthony Boccardo, who is now in camp in Louisiana, writes to The Courier as follows:

Camp Claiborne, La.,
March 3, 1942.

Editor of The Courier

Dear Sir:

This is to inform you that I am now receiving the Bristol Courier daily. And I sure do enjoy reading the old home-town newspaper.

Some time ago the Bristol Bowling Association gave to all its former bowlers (who are now in the armed forces of the U. S.) a gift. I happen to be one of their former bowlers, and I want to thank them all sincerely. It sort of makes a soldier feel good to know that the people in his home town take great pride in their boys. Little things like that keep us in good spirits. And again I want to thank the Bristol Bowling Association, its officers, and its members and sportsmen.

Thank you.

Hiram H. Keller Finds Self In New Role During Dramatic Court Scene

"NIGHT OF JAN. 16TH"

Benefit for Medical Supplies Division, County Defense Council

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 6.—A verdict of "not guilty" climaxed the three-act murder trial drama, "The Night of January 16th," which was "staged" in Bucks County court house last evening. In commenting on the freedom given Karen Andre (Susan Dolph) by the "jury," drawn from among the play-goers, Judge Calvin S. Boyer, who took the part of Judge Heath in the famed play, informed the jury that he could not thank it for such a verdict and directed that names of the jurors "be stricken from the jury lists for a period of five years."

The dramatic trial "staged" in the court room will be presented again this evening as a benefit for the Medical Supplies Division of Bucks County Council of Defense.

Mill Street Stores To Close Two Evenings

In order to conserve electricity for national defense, and also to give employees more time for recreation, as well as protect the health of these employees by giving them shorter working hours, members of the Mill Street Business Men's Association, meeting in regular monthly session at Cooradas Restaurant last evening, instituted a program whereby they hope all members will close every Tuesday and Wednesday evening during the entire year.

The consensus of opinion of those members present was that this was an excellent move. Vice-President Abe Popkin, who was in charge of the meeting, will announce a committee within the next few days which will contact every business establishment in the business district. The tentative date for the opening of this new schedule was set for April 7th.

Stores will still continue the policy begun several years ago of closing every Wednesday at one p. m. during June, July and August.

It was pointed out that several stores have already started a program of closing certain nights each week and that these programs appear to be working satisfactorily.

Routine business consumed the balance of the meeting time. One new member, Charles Richman, 315 Mill street, was introduced to the members present.

FRIDAY, MARCH 6, 1942

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE

It is not likely that the average citizen will be greatly disturbed or surprised by the statement of Price Administrator Leon Henderson to the effect that the average American must be prepared to accept soon a standard of living similar to that of 1932, the worst of the depression years of the last decade. Nor is it probable that the average citizen will be astonished to learn that next year will bring a still lower standard of living because of greater war production.

During the depression, the citizen was not able to comprehend the reason for his plight. In that period he knew that products of all types abounded in this country, and he knew that artificial means were being employed to prevent a greater surplus. He had difficulty at that time in understanding the reason for a low living standard. The average man does not like to suffer without cause.

Today, the citizen knows that his country and his own personal freedom are in jeopardy. He is willing to forgive errors of the past provided he can feel assured that they will not be committed again. And he is willing to do without any number of things in order to see this war through to a finish. But the citizen wants to be protected against the inflation of which Mr. Henderson warns.

Americans are quite well aware of what happened in Germany when inflation occurred. They do not like the prospect of having the same thing happen here. They do not mind reducing their standard of living, but they do not like the prospect of facing the loss of all their resources.

MAPLE SYRUP

Before many days the alternate night freezes and daytime thaws will start the sap rising in sugar trees in the northern half of the United States lying east of the Mississippi. This will be the signal for owners of sugar camps to begin the yearly routine of tapping trees, collecting the sap and reducing it to syrup or sugar. The existing sugar shortage is expected to improve the market for sugar tree products and many camps are preparing to increase their output if possible.

Some experiments have been underway in Michigan to determine whether tapping other trees would be commercially profitable. Almost any tree will flow sap. An inferior quality of "sugar water" can be obtained from soft maples, but more of it is needed to produce syrup. One experimenter has announced that a palatable syrup may be made from the sap of walnut trees.

But farmers who process syrup and sugar will remain true to the hard maples, or sugar trees. And they will face another season with the realization that few enterprises show as small a return on what might be termed the original investment. It takes fifty gallons of sap to make a gallon of maple syrup, and the shrinkage is even greater if the boiling is continued to produce maple syrup.

When a bomb exploded near them, Von Papen, Nazi envoy to Turkey, and his wife were thrown to the street. No horses being nearby, their snouts unfortunately were not stomped on while they were down.

A horse must be fed, curried and brushed, but it isn't necessary to fill him with anti-freeze.

for its life in a planetary war, the co-operative and selfish insistence of these lobbies upon special favors which imperil the national interests is enough to justify public resentment and revolt. It is the sort of thing that ought not to be tolerated. It is the sort of thing for which there is neither excuse nor defense. A fine example of the you tickle me and I'll tickle you technique of this lobby combination was given this week in Washington when the House began consideration of the Farm Credit Administration appropriations in the agricultural bill. The Byrd committee had urged drastic reductions in both the scope and the funds of the FCA. Tender concerning one of his own creations, the President could not bring himself to go as far as the Byrd committee, though agreeing on the necessity of curtailment. Nevertheless, he did recommend a considerable cut. Despite all this, the farm lobby opposed any reduction and put its whole weight behind unrestricted continuation. It was at this juncture that somewhat pompous and pretentious "labor statesman," as his press agents like to refer to Mr. Philip Murray, of the CIO, thrust himself into the picture.

NOW, the FCA is no concern of Mr. Murray's. He is not employed to represent it and he knows nothing about it. Farm problems are foreign to him and in the true interests of labor (to say nothing of those of the nation) he should oppose all appropriations for unnecessary activities—and especially any legislation likely to increase the cost of food. Because unnecessary expenditures, as the President has pointed out, increase the dangers of inflation, from which the wage earners whom Mr. Murray represents would suffer more than anyone else. And also because any rise in the cost of food products will be felt hurtfully by the wage earners in increased cost of living.

BUT none of these things deterred this "labor statesman" from adding the weight of his lobby to the weight of the farm lobby in an effort to frustrate the recommendations of the President, whose support is so ardently advocated in the windy statements that issue from labor headquarters. On Monday, as the House prepared to take up the bill, Mr. Murray publicly proclaimed himself as in favor not of the contraction but of the expansion of the FCA program, declaring that "it is important that organized labor lend its support to this program . . . because it is imperative that the industrial workers and the working farmers of this country stand shoulder to shoulder in this emergency." In other words the Tugwellian plan.

THE sheer effrontery of this is hard to exaggerate. Its hubbubbery is complete. It is a clear case of the labor lobby supporting the farm lobby in an effort to hold on to costly favors to which it was never fairly entitled, in return for support which the labor lobby has had in the past—and expects in the future—from the farm lobby for advantages to which the labor lobby is not fairly entitled. It is a back-scratching operation which utterly ignores the national interests and renders ridiculous the President's insistence that the war calls for sacrifices from all classes. What makes it particularly odious is the constant posing of these lobbyists as unselfish patriots, eager to give all to save the country. If, with full understanding of this game, the people do not boil, then apparently they no longer have a boiling point. And failure to understand certainly lends support to the theory that we are essentially a nation of saps and nothing can be done about it.

If You Can't Go—Give!

CHAPTER TWENTY

A cold breeze raked the deck of the "Vandam" as it crept through the darkness. Brinda Duncan leaned against the rail, gazing in the good feel of wind and fog, drinking in the damp salt air. She thought that somewhere aboard was a German agent, who held the fate of Sir John in his hands, filled her with an excitement that verged on fear. Could she seek him out and wrest from him that list of agents before he made contact with the enemy? Could she find him in time?

She stared into the darkness for a little while, then turned from the rail and started toward the dining-room. Her course took her along "B" deck. Near the head of the stairs, a cabin-door opened, and a man stepped out. He almost bumped into her.

"Forgive me—the darkness," he apologized. His English was slightly accented. As he stood aside to let her pass, she had a startling sense of having seen him before. From the corner of her eye, she noted the number of his cabin, 210.

As she continued to the dining saloon, she had the feeling that he was watching her.

While sitting on deck, before dinner, Brinda was approached by the tall blond who reiterated apologies for the recent bumping accident and introduced himself as Kurt Larsen, of Copenhagen. He said he was engaged in civil engineering that took him throughout Europe, including even the countries at war. And he stressed his sense of strict Danish neutrality.

Larsen seemed amused by Brinda's series of naive remarks. "You must know considerable about conditions in Germany and France?" "Do the German people approve Hitler's alliance with Stalin?" "And the food shortage . . . ?"

With an ironical smile, the handsome stranger interrupted: "Let's have a cocktail, Miss Duncan, and after dinner, may we play ping-pong? Let's not discuss the war. Your eyes are too disturbing for a serious conversation. Have a cigarette?"

Larsen held out his massive silver case. Before taking one Brinda hesitated for a second—she looked at the masterly giant. He had been her companion for the past half hour . . . had she forgotten her mission—and Dick? It looked as though she had been magnetized by the clear light blue eyes of the Nordic engineer.

She took a cigarette and arose. Later, Larsen joined her at dinner. The steward served the hors d'oeuvres.

"This butter is excellent, isn't it?" exclaimed Larsen, preparing a roll for Brinda. She didn't answer, but a smile played around her lovely lips . . .

That evening Brinda sat in her deck chair watching promenading passengers . . . If only luck were with her. She had three days left to succeed in her mission. The Vandam would reach Naples then and the lost list of the British secret agents would be on its way . . .

She supposed that there were English secret service men on board the "Vandam." Was she not mad to attempt this capture—with such professionals around her?

Who was the Caucasian who called himself a prospector of oil wells in Baku . . . or the Norwegian banker with the smiling eyes? She had danced with a supposed South American senator and though his tangoing was perfect, where did he really come from?

And why waste her time thinking about men? She might look for a woman spy . . .

The atmosphere on the liner was tense—more like in a mental ward at Bellevue than on a luxury liner. It was one of those wartime voyages when those who are not worrying about what may be happening to their homes, or to their business, sit up all night with their life belts on, dreading mines or submarines.

Brinda's meditation was interrupted by a strange looking older woman. She looked more like a medium priced fortune teller on a vacation, with her colored scarves and ridiculously rouged cheeks, than the school teacher she said she was. With five mystery novels under her arms she stopped to talk to Brinda about the weather.

A beautiful platinum blonde walked by. She was a refugee from a stranded musical comedy company, which had toured Central Europe, returning to her native land. The heels on her shoes were so high she could hardly balance herself. Nevertheless there was inexplicable sadness in her baby blue eyes. Was her conscience bothering her or did she worry about her next evening dress?

This was the kind of woman who would succumb to the fatal charms of "Ajax," the master Nazi spy, Brinda thought. But the platinum blonde gave no sign of wanting to talk to anyone. Brinda arose. She would find a pretext . . .

The middle aged woman immediately occupied the deck chair she vacated. Brinda had almost reached the blonde when the interesting "perpetuum mobile," the eternally walking dark Russian woman, who wore a mannish suit and spoke with a slavic accent, approached her.

"Miss Duncan, won't you make a fourth at bridge with us?" She tipped the end of her small cigar.

"I'd love to, but I wouldn't dare. Thanks just the same." Then she added, "My game is awful."

Brinda nodded and hurried on. The platinum blonde had disappeared in the meantime.

"You still owe me a game of ping-pong." It was the pleasant voice of Larsen interrupting her unsuccessful search. Brinda hesitated; then asked, "What do we play for?"

"Perhaps a kiss?"

She smiled—obviously pleased: "Good . . . a kiss it shall be!"

They began the game, after putting their evening coats aside. Brinda was winning when suddenly an idea struck her. She started losing deliberately. Soon Larsen counted the score: "Nineteen—twenty—twenty-one! I win and now . . . the prize!"

Pouting like a little girl, Brinda kissed his left cheek after murmuring, "A debt of honor must be paid." Then she exclaimed: "Oh, I've messed you all up with my rouge . . . so sorry!" And she started scrubbing his cheek violently with her chiffon handkerchief. His face thoroughly cleaned, she smiled at him mischievously . . .

Just then the platinum blonde passed by. Larsen greeted her. "Oh, you ladies haven't met? This is Miss Duncan, Miss Olin."

Brinda was delighted to talk to the girl at last.

"I've won at ping-pong from Miss Duncan," Larsen announced proudly. With a thin little voice, the blonde replied: "I have never played ping-pong. Can't stand it."

Brinda looked at her, the expression on her face seemed sedately sinister.

"Have a drink with us in the bar," Larsen invited.

"Thanks, but I am awfully tired. Will you excuse me?" She nodded to Larsen, and left.

"Strange girl, isn't she?" remarked Brinda.

Larsen shrugged his shoulders: "Average show girl, that's all."

"Have you another of those cigarettes you gave me earlier today?" Brinda asked, suddenly changing the subject.

"Certainly!" Larsen opened his case. "I'm glad you like them, they are mild."

Brinda smiled: "They are stronger than you think."

Upon returning to her cabin, Brinda was in high spirits. She had danced till three in the morning with Larsen and others.

In her note sent to Dick before boarding the Vandam she had promised to send him a wire in simple code, which wouldn't be suspicious. If she had been unsuccessful the wire would be worded:

"Crossing calm fondly—Duncan."

If, however, she had been able to discover something important she would say: "All my thoughts with you darling—Duncan."

She meditated for a little while. Which one should she send? Having decided that problem, she entered the wireless room.

Dick's answer came next morning: "Thanks for good wishes kisses Aunt Emma."

Nothing could have pleased Brinda more. It meant that Dick would take measures to help her; perhaps in Gibraltar where the "Vandam" would be stopped and subjected to British inspection . . .

Good old Dick! Her heart was filled with tenderness. She forgot all her previous anger and jealousy.

Brinda entered the large saloon. Tired, she sank down in a large comfortable armchair. The platinum blonde appeared, apparently in a more friendly mood, with the suggestion: "I'm dying for some American coffee—aren't you?"

Brinda called the steward and asked, "Any possibility of getting some real American coffee?"

"I'll try," he smiled as Brinda looked at him and wondered where she had seen his face before.

"Perhaps Mr. Larsen will join us," the platinum blonde murmured hopefully, ordering service for three.

"Have you known Larsen long?" Brinda asked the girl, who hesitated for a while.

"No . . . not very long, but he is charming . . ."

Brinda agreed to this and Larsen came in a moment later. He joined them, delighted to notice that they had anticipated his presence when service for three arrived.

The blonde made a dissatisfied face after tasting the coffee, but Larsen drank it in large gulps, exclaiming: "Wonderful! The coffee is good."

Brinda looked at him silently, then took a sip. It was mediocre coffee, indeed.

All at once Brinda recalled where she had seen the steward. He had been waiting on her that night in the "Red Cat." Why was he on board this Dutch steamer?

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Next morning, Brinda awoke, conscious of having overslept. What had happened? She remembered Dick talking intently to Gladys. And Prince Vaslav, ignoring Gladys, and lavishing attention only on her.

Well, why not? Dick was engaged to Gladys. It would be a good marriage for him—the impetuous naval lieutenant married to the Mountwinn millions. That must be his reason if he didn't love Gladys.

As for Vaslav, he was a rich refugee but with a real Prince and, more important, a marvelous dancer. And he realized that she was a dancer, too—good enough to be the premiere danseuse in a ballet that would be attended by some of the best people of London.

Dancers understood each other. You talked with your body. Or better yet, you didn't talk at all, just soared on the music. Vaslav understood that. Dick didn't. He danced well, but—like he did everything else—correctly, reasonably.

Vaslav had brought them home in an utterly luxurious limousine driven by a silent, efficient chauffeur. He had kissed her hand at the door while Dick stood by silent, furious.

She wasn't in love with Vaslav—she would never be. But he intrigued her. And it had been fun to watch Gladys's face. Was Gladys in love with the Prince? She acted it. Yet she was going to marry Dick. What a greedy girl!—did she think she could have everything?

The housekeeper knocked at the door. "A florist's parcel, Miss Brinda." She sniffed and departed. Sitting up in bed, Brinda opened the herb-bonned package.

Oreohids! Beautiful ones—splashed with green and gold and black. She had never seen any like them. And a tiny card with a monarchical crest—Vaslav's—"To my lovely premiere danseuse."

Brinda held them against her skin. They complemented it exactly. That was the kind of a thing you could trust a man like Vaslav to do correctly. As to other things—well, she would find out.

Meanwhile, there was the task of convincing Sir John—of persuading him that she should not leave England as yet.

Prince Vaslav had told her the names of the patrons and patronesses of the benefit for the evacuees. It was a distinguished roster. If anything could sway her guardian, such names would.

It was a brilliant, sunny morning, and war and peril seemed far away. After all, even in wartime, there were people who had to play, who had to make the world forget its woes. That was probably her function, after all. Dick and Sir John were right. She had no business fooling with the serious side of the world dance. And Vaslav, who had no active interest in war either, would dance with her. In a way that was helping people—helping them to forget.

She made a leisurely toilet, lingering in the bath, pausing briefly before a pier-glass for a critical inspection of herself . . . she thought of Gladys . . . compared herself with her former schoolmate . . . But—

Gladys was the heiress to the Mountwinn millions, while she, Brinda, was only the adopted ward of an army officer. . . . If Gladys wanted to, she could get Dick. But Brinda was sure that if she wanted to stop Gladys from getting Vaslav, she could!

Brinda hummed a haunting bar from a dance-melody of the previous night, executed a swift pirouette. She was glad Aunt Vick had insisted on her studying ballet. Even though that lady thoroughly disapproved of dancing as a profession, she had a theory that only those who studied ballet as children knew how to walk—a theory by which Brinda had proved more than Sir John's sedate relative knew.

Sir John had not subscribed enthusiastically to this crotchety of his elderly aunt. He had some prejudice against dancers.

Brinda paused suddenly in the act of slipping into a flimsy boudoir robe. She had just remembered her guardian's anger when she had mentioned Mata Hari. That famous spy had been a dancer, too.

She wondered again why Sandy had been so disturbed at her innocent mention of the alluring spy. Then Brinda smiled; perhaps Sandy had once matched wits with Mata Hari and lost. But that wasn't probable, because Sir John hadn't been assigned to Intelligence during the previous war.

Well, dancing was more fun than spying anyway—and certainly a lot less dangerous. Poor Mata Hari—riddled by a French firing squad! Ugh!

Her eyes encountered the pearls she had worn the night before. Better put them back in the jewel-cabinet.

Kneeling lithely, she opened the secret drawer. She gasped. There, before her lay the tiny, flimsy, hastily scrawled note she had written in the house on the moor.

Somehow, it had become entangled in the clasp of the other necklace—the string of carved jade she had discarded in favor of the pearls.

She snatched up the precious memorandum. It was clear enough now—considering the circumstances under which it had been written. Latitude, longitude, degrees, minutes. . . . Dick Malden would know what they meant. But still there was the question of the identity of the ship. Well, perhaps Dick would know that, too.

She forgot all her recent resolutions. This was a question of helping Sir John—of recovering the stolen list of agents from England's enemies.

Tells Women To Get Away From The Old Formula

cause. We are at war. Under the Democratic regime, states are becoming less and less important and we have to fight this tooth and nail.

"This situation is bad enough but there are dangers much more imminent since the situation that was created December 7 last.

"I am a woman of peace," Secretary O'Hara declared, "but I still maintain the right of power to maintain that peace, even if it is necessary to maintain peace for others in doing so. We are living in an entirely different age today.

"For instance, I heard General Hershey remark in Washington recently, 'The American people are air-minded, now they must be air-conditioned.'

"The scene of the last World War was thousands of miles away. Women gave their sons then, but they did not come in contact with the actual war as today. The battle line of action in this war is over every man's roof and home and the sooner we take that to heart the better off we will be."

Mrs. O'Hara spoke of the sporadic bombing of our coast lines and said it was part of modern warfare which is being carried to the door of every civilian as part of the modern technique of war.

"If you can conquer a people by terror and confusion, why spend money for armament and kill with guns that cost a lot of money," she asked. "That's the system used many times in this war."

"Here in Pennsylvania our civilian life and our defense plants must be properly protected so that we can carry on. Be alert at all times. As women, know where to go to report infractions and suspicious actions and don't become terrified or confused. Know where to get your official orders."

"I sometimes think that Orson Welles should have a government medal because he proved that American people could be terrorized."

Miss O'Hara also emphasized the fact that the war program must take the place of some of the long-time programs that have been in operation for years. Our efforts should be centered right now on civilian defense work. See to it that your community is well-organized and never forget that confusion and terror are the greatest menace to our success," she said.

Pennsylvania's Assistant Secretary of Highways, C. H. Buckius, of Mt. Gretna, declared that organizations these days are judged to a great extent by the contribution they make to the war effort.

"That's one of the reasons I'm proud of being a member of the Republican party," he added. "And I'm proud of being a Pennsylvanian, too," he continued.

"Let's get away from this money-talk and big headlines and say it with action in this war effort."

Mr. Buckius spoke of the Highway Department accomplishments in this state and assured the women that Pennsylvania's 45,000-mile highway system can be turned from a peace time system to a war time system immediately.

"I don't think there is a man living who could have handled the highway situation in Pennsylvania better than our own Governor James," he declared. "And the same goes for the way that the Governor handled the civilian defense set-up."

Comparing the expenditures of other years for highway maintenance in our state, Mr. Buckius declared:

"If the policy set down by Governor James had been in operation for the past 10 years as it was since he became Governor, we would have saved the grand total of $46,000,000 on maintenance alone in our state. Such things as this can be accomplished by party responsibility."

The luncheon meeting was held at the Doylestown Inn and attended by eighty women from various sections of Bucks county. The Council president, Mrs. J. Howard Kooker, of Quakertown, presided.

Announcement was made that an all-day meeting of the Council will be held in Doylestown on May 7, probably in the Educational Building of the Presbyterian Church, with Mrs. Worthington Scranton as one of the speakers. There will be no Council meeting in April.

Mrs. Kooker announced a meeting of the directors of the Council to be held at her home, 237 North Hellertown avenue, Quakertown, March 20.

artist should be given a break, like anyone else in business."

As early as 1928 the French were talking about the next war, said Mrs. Albee. She tells of how troop movements were seen then, and how there was a kind of hatred against the Americans for their part in the last war. She says they even went so far as to repeat: "Of course, there'll be another war" and "We won the war and you didn't."

"When they took some of the boys out of school, companions of our boys to put them into the Army, we began to believe the rumors were true," said Mrs. Albee.

Mr. and Mrs. Albee described how much their coming to Bucks county three years ago has improved their work. What is more important, they have received more unsolicited praise, as well as art awards here than in their whole stay on the continent of Europe.

Mrs. Albee says her five sons need lots of room, and this is one of the reasons they settled on their farm of 23 acres, nestled on the brow of a steep hill north of this village, three years ago. She was in a happy mood because she had just received word that she had won the prize in the section of wood-engravings at the Philadelphia Print Club's 16th annual exhibition, which opened last week.

A few years ago Grace Albee won an honorable mention for a print of an old buggy relegated to a scrap heap of old auto tires and other junk. She seems to have fondness for old things that may be sturdily made, but on the down grade. For example, the Albee home is one of the century-old farm houses accoutred with all the useful attachments familiar to the Pennsylvania Dutch houses of this section.

Mr. Albee studied at the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence, where he met his wife. He also studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, Philadelphia, and in France. He is represented by murals and decorations in many public buildings in Providence, as well as elsewhere in the United States. He won prizes at exhibitions of the Palm Beach Art Association, Florida, the Allied Artists, New York, and the museum in Providence.

Mrs. Albee and her husband went abroad after their sons were born, when the youngest was only three years old.

While in Paris, Mrs. Robert Spencer offered to rent them her Bucks county farm. The two artists kept thinking of the famous art colony until they went back to New York. They saw an advertisement about another farm in 1933 and decided to buy.

The Albee family includes: William, who works for the Fleetwings, Inc., Bristol; P. Frederick, Jr., a reporter for a Bethlehem newspaper; John F., a student at Brown University; Edward F., a senior at Storm King School on the Hudson, N. Y.; and Nathaniel, a photographer in Easton.

You'd quickly write out a check for $50 if that were the only thing that would bring him a tin cup of water when that water was the most precious thing on earth to him.

There'll be many boys, not a few of whom you know, in fixes like this before this war is over and won. $50 from you now—or $20, $10, or $5—will see that they get far more than the blessing of that tin cup of water. It will help make sure that they get bandages, stretchers, hospital beds, life-saving medicines, life-giving blood transfusions... the warm heart and helping hand of the Red Cross reaching out to them in their hour of suffering.

The Red Cross is the official heart of the Armed Forces of the United States of America. Your part in this all-out war right now is to give—generously, sacrificially—to that heart. Give now, give again and again to the RED CROSS WAR FUND!

Tells Exchangeites Of Salvation Army

Miami Exchange Club while on vacation in Florida. He brought back a message of the good will and fellowship, typical in Exchange, from the Miami Club.

Prior to the business meeting, President DeLong introduced Major Fred O'Neill of the Salvation Army representing the greater Philadelphia area, who spoke to the club on the work of the Army.

Major O'Neill gave a very interesting story of the many worthy projects carried on by his organization in the Philadelphia district. He explained that the Army co-ordinates its work with other social agencies. "In its drive for funds in our district we have set the sum of $225,000 as our goal for the coming year to enable us to carry on our welfare work," said Major O'Neill. Many of the projects such as the Ivy House which is a home for children between the ages of two and have been turned over to the Salvation Army by the courts, the summer camp at Upland, Pa., for mothers and children who are undernourished; the transient service for men and women who reach the city without funds for food and lodging; the work of the Army in providing religious services such as in the Prison Department; the Roxborough, Pa., Home for Social Service which is entirely self-supporting were of extreme interest to the members.

The work of the Army in co-ordination with other social and welfare organizations connected with the United Service Organization for providing aid and recreational facilities for the service men of all the Allied Nations was thoroughly covered.

Major O'Neill was assured of club support at the conclusion of his interesting explanation of the social services carried on by the Salvation Army.

Girls' Friendly Group Has Associates As Guests

YARDLEY, Mar. 6.—Members of the Girls' Friendly Society entertained the associates at a covered dish supper in the parish house, with a business meeting following the supper, when Miss Betty Grundy presided.

The devotionals were conducted by Miss Betsy Foulke and the minutes read by Miss Alice Loef. Treasurer's report was given by Mildred Elizabeth Dillplane.

Those present were: Mrs. James Hunt, the Misses Gladys A. Harper, Elizabeth MacDonnell, Marion Scott, Betsy Foulke, Mildred Dillplane, Betty Grundy, Louise Hagenlocker, Alice Loef; Mrs. William S. Taylor, the Rev. Walter C. Pugh.

HULMEVILLE

Mrs. Earl Foster and Mrs. Helen Chamberlain will serve on the entertainment committee when a St. Patrick's party follows the meeting of Ladies' Auxiliary next Monday evening in the fire station. The meeting is called for eight o'clock.

There were 29 members gathered at the home of Mrs. Walter Prickett, Bristol Township, on Tuesday evening for the meeting of the Methodist La-adies' Aid Society. Mrs. Samuel K. Faust presided, and nomination of officers ensued. Identity of "secret sisters" was revealed, and new names chosen. The Aid is now selling dish-cloths. The next meeting on Wednesday, April 1st, will be held in the church. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Here and There In Bucks County Towns used by Mrs. Mason, a teacher in the Solebury consolidated school.

Members of the Chalfont Fire Company were summoned, and when they arrived at the scene, they thought the horse might have been seriously injured or killed, and the automobile wrecked, but as they began removing the debris they found the horse safe and sound, but rather excited, and the automobile undamaged.

The amount of the loss has not been determined.

Three hours after the guests departed from celebrating the 55th anniversary of his marriage, George Z. Stempel, 81, of Castle Valley, suffered a heart attack Sunday evening and passed away.

Falling in line with the National Defense program of the conservation of automobile tires and gasoline, the Doylestown School Board decided to authorize the construction of out-of-doors fire-places and picnic tables on the new school ground on West Court street.

President William H. Satterthwaite, Jr., said that picnics, which are to be held there or other out-of-doors events, will have to be properly supervised, and that an effort will be made to see to it that the out-of-doors fire-place and tables will be placed so that they will not spoil the school grounds.

J. Leonard Halderman, who asked the board for permission to convert the school ground into a picnic spot, said that the P. T. A. is going to discuss recreational facilities in the County Seat and one of their suggestions was to have at least one open-air fire-place constructed on the grounds at no expense to the school board.

Routine reports submitted at the meeting of the Plumsteadville Fire Company, included the statement by Chief Robert J. Schleicher that a new booster tank had been purchased and installed on the apparatus.

Reports of the activities of the firemen during the past month were presented by Assistant Chief Walter D. Rush, who stated the volunteers had been called into service twice since the last meeting. They were called on Monday, February 23rd, to fight a grass fire on the Eli Serekow farm, formerly the Abraham Landes property, east of the village, and two days later they responded to a call from the home of Mrs. Howard Rush, Carly Hill, to extinguish a chimney fire. No property damage was caused by the fires.

Mr. Rush reported also that several of the members of the local company are taking the advanced course in fire fighting at the headquarters of the Midway Fire Company, Lahaska. Sponsored by the Midway Fire Company, the school is attended by representatives of fire companies in Lahaska, Plumsteadville, New Hope and Wycombe. Lieutenant James Farley, of the Philadelphia Fire Department, is in charge.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. George Eisenhardt and daughter Barbara were Saturday visitors of Mrs. Eisenhardt's sister in Philadelphia.

Mrs. George Benneman attended the service when Degrees were conferred by Court Holy Trinity, Catholic Daughters of America, in St. Dominic's Hall, Holmesburg, Sunday afternoon. A roast beef dinner was served to all new candidates. Raymond Benneman has been confined to his home with an attack of grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Coyne had as visitors on Sunday, Miss Frances Quinn and Miss Helen Zimarski, Allentown. On Tuesday, Mrs. Coyne was hostess to the sewing club of which she is a member.

Richard Trischler is recovering from an attack of grippe.

GRAND THEATRE

Coming on the 25th anniversary of the filming of the first "Tarzan" picture, M-G-M's "Tarzan's Secret Treasure" opened last night on the Grand screen as one of the most entertaining of this popular series of pictures.

Johnny Weissmuller, as "Tarzan," again presents his breath-taking feats of swimming underwater, diving off cliffs and swinging through the trees, while Maureen O'Sullivan offers a fascinating picture of a wife who can do wonders into transforming a tree-house into a comfortable home despite the absence of such modern conveniences as refrigerators, plumbing and electricity.

Surely, if the young people of the nation find so much to enjoy there in real life, it was decided a rousing, true-to-life comedy could be made.

Few men excel Buck Jones at riding, and the hero of "Forbidden Trails," with Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton, now showing at the Bristol Theatre, was once engaged by the French and Italian governments to break in and train their horses for their respective armies.

RITZ THEATRE

Carol Bruce, beautiful Brooklyn thrush, definitely establishes herself as a ranking screen personality in "Keep 'Em Flying," which opens today at the Ritz Theatre. She was signed by Universal after she became the toast of Broadway through her exceptional performance in the footlight production of "Louisiana Purchase."

BEAUTY PARADE

By Max Factor, Jr.
Famous Hollywood Make-Up Specialist
Writing For I. N. S.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. - (INS) - It is practically impossible for hair to be shampooed too frequently.

The still occasionally held belief that shampooing at too frequent intervals will harm the hair is "an erroneous one. Cleanliness is essential to hair health and beauty, and shampooing is essential to such cleanliness.

The myth about damaging the hair by shampooing it too often was probably first inspired, many years ago, by those women who shampooed their own hair along incorrect and inefficient lines, and then blamed the unattractive results on the whole institution of frequent shampooing, rather than on their own ineptness.

Such a mistake could very easily be made by the woman who shampooed her own hair at comparatively close intervals, but who failed to finally rinse it as thoroughly as necessary. Any failure in rinsing almost invariably leaves some trace of soap film. This dulls the hair. In more cases than one this dullness has been mistakenly blamed on "too much shampooing."

Women who have their shampooing done by a beauty parlor operator are seldom faced with this rinsing-dullness problem. Skilled operators are well aware of the need for thoroughness in rinsing.

Women who shampoo their own hair can usually obtain the best results by using the regular shampoo soaps which are made for this purpose. If a cake shampoo soap is used, never apply it directly to the hair. Lather the soap in your hands, and apply its suds. Liquid shampoo soap, however, can be applied directly to the hair.

One rinsing isn't enough after any shampoo. Two are better. Three are better yet. And, if you have the time, try four or five rinsings.

If the hair is dull and lifeless even after exhaustively thorough rinsing with clear water, try one more rinsing with water to which vinegar or lemon juice has been added. If this device fails, try combing a little olive oil, or prepared hair oil, through your hair. Follow this by a brisk brushing.

Don't overlook the part steady brushing plays in hair health and beauty. Brushing, like shampooing, can hardly be overdone. Don't think that because your hair is short you don't need to brush it. You do.

SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

EXPLORE the Day-time Dress Dept. on Snellenburg's 2nd fl. Stride right by the regular house dresses to the particular corner where the "Mayflower" chambrays and madras wash frocks are selling for only $5. You'll want them later for anything from marketing to golfing, so good are their sport lines, and you'll want them right now for that gay, first suits and the light trappers. Bob in and have a try-on. In this spirit in earliest spring. Grand, full backs with yokes, high and low necks, generous skirts, good buttons. Really swank.

MORE FLATTERING. Yes, hats are still crazy, but in Snellenburg's little 2nd fl. salon of stylists' selections of better hats, spring models show a grace and becomingness more than rearsuring. These early spring notes have a sharp little harmony all their own. Most of them can be worn now and certainly with the first suits and the light trappers. Bob in and have a try-on. In this spirit in earliest spring. Grand, full backs with yokes, high and low necks, generous skirts, good buttons. Really swank.

AN UNREAL SHOW. You've guessed it—simulated flowers! Snellenburg's are having a real show of them and it's as exciting as though every bloom were garden raised. What lovely spots of color these hand-made blooms can make through the house while we're waiting for the first real blooms to pop! Buy some for your house, your table, for a troubled person, a cranky one, a sick one. This lasting loveliness costs from 25c to $2.50. See the show anyway—these modern, simulated flowers are amazing. 3rd fl., China Dept.

BUY BEST. When it comes to what might be called clothing "staples," spend as much as your conscience will let you if you want durability. One of the best buys anywhere in town happens to be a slip of which Snellenburg's are justly proud. They make you walk off with it, feeling the same as they do. These Seams' Prufe slips are tops for cut, materials, and correct style, and each outwears three of the cheaper sort. Sizes 32 to 44, $2.25; sizes to 52, $2.95. Short, medium, and long lengths. Tealose, white, blue, black. Tailored or lace trimmed. Shadow and rip proof. Satin or crepe. Underwear Dept., 2nd fl.

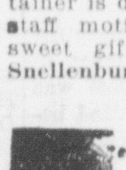

YOUR SPORT SUIT. The Sports Wear Dept. is one of my favorite corners in the big, friendly Snellenburg establishment. The folks there do seem to know exactly what to select for us to make us more attractive than we thought we could be. See, especially, their new $10.95 to $12.95 suits, softly colorful plaids and Glen plaids. Skirts are pleated and graceful, jackets the fashionable length, all labeled for wool content. Lovely for wear under coats and, soon, without. 2nd fl.

"DO-RE-ME" YOU! Puzzled? Well, this little musical twister is the name of triplet lipsticks being introduced by famous Frances Denney. The three different shades are compactly on hand, in one folder, to blend with whatever clothes you may be wearing. Amazingly, the three cost but $1, and refills are priced $1 for three or 35c for one. The shades are very new—Watermelon, Derby Red, Night Club. Smart harmony? I'll say! The witty gadget container is decorated with a musical staff motif. A thrilling buy or sweet gift. Toiletries Dept. on Snellenburg's 1st fl.

MARK THE DATE! On Wednesday, March 11th, an outstanding fashion show of the year—the Snellenburg Auditorium's display and modeling of the very correct things. It is wartime, to be sure, but fashions are all the gayer for morale. Nevertheless, they are convenient and are streamlined for durability. As usual, this shop has firmly controlled pricing. You will be exhilarated at seeing what American designers have done for you. You will also be grateful for the way in which this shop insists upon saving your clothes money for you. Shows at 2:30 P.M. and 7:30 P.M. 3rd fl.

SUPERSTITIOUS? If you're the sort of person who says, "It never rains when I carry an umbrella!" then, for Pete's sake, buy your blackout shades early! Snellenburg's 1st fl. Stationery Dept. is busily selling an excellent fire-proofed fabric black shade weighted with top and bottom rollers. Put it up (and leave it) with one small nail top and bottom. Rolled to top when not needed. 30x54, 89c; 36x72, 99c; 48x84, $1.25. Don't delay!

Easter is in the air. Next week read about the latest pretties for the spring parade and your victory morale. I'll be telling you! Now, cheery shopping for today's "buys"—and for more than your money's worth! Faithfully, FAITH.

SUNDAY DINNER
Suggestions

NEWS from the meat and poultry counters this week should make selections of next Sunday's dinner an easier task. Beef prices, generally speaking, are lower, and lamb shows lower price tickets than any week this month. Pork is the only meat showing a rise in price.

Broilers and fryers and turkeys continue to be starred in the poultry division—with prices at a level within the reach of all.

For those who concentrate on eggs and fish during Lent, the news is good. Quality of eggs is excellent, and supplies are increasing. Fish news is as cheerful: plenty of fish from Florida and Virginia waters.

Texas and California are both sending in adequate supplies of vegetables and fruits—at prices that are reasonable for this season.

Miss Marion Rouse Budd, of the A and P Kitchen, has prepared three menus at different price levels for your next Sunday dinner. Here are her menus:

Low Cost Dinner
Stuffed Lamb Shoulder
Corn O'Brien
Buttered Peas
Whole Wheat Bread and Butter
Chocolate Rice Pudding

Medium Cost Dinner

MANHATTAN WINS SECOND GAME IN THE PLAYOFF SERIES, DEFEATING PROFY TEAM, 48 TO 38

Failing to maintain its pace set in the first half of the tilt, the Profy team lost to the Manhattan A. A. last night on the Mutual Aid floor. Final score was 48-38 and it was the second straight win for the Manhattans in the five-game playoff series to decide the Bristol Basketball League championship.

The Profytes set up a wonderful pace in the opening twenty minutes and twice wrested the lead from the high-scoring Manhattans. At half-time, the Mill Streeters had rallied enough to amass a 6 point lead. Again at the end of the third period, the Profytes were ahead, this time by four points.

But after Maurice Mulligan dead-locked the score early in the final period, it was the spark which set the soapmen's scoring machine into action. It was the flame which set Ralph Cahall going. And when Cahall started, Snyder and Roe followed suit and from then on, the Profy team crumbled to pieces.

Joe Roe's scoring in the first half of the tilt was the factor which kept Manhattan in the game. The Mill Streeters had succeeded in putting the brakes on both Snyder and Cahall but failed to reckon with Roe. Joe registered nine points in the first half set-up and had been credited with two assists on other goals to personally account for 13 of the Manhattan points.

During this first-half route, Teddy Sak had succeeded in blocking all of Cahall's attempts at field goals and managed to blank the league's highest scorer from the field. While this was going on, "Jobby" Dugan had stopped Joe Snyder dead in his tracks, Snyder getting a lone field goal on a tap after a missed foul. Dugan had also helped the Profy team to its first half lead by scoring 7 points.

It was a confident Profy team that went into the dressing room after its successful first half showing. After the intermission, Joe Roe hit the cords for two long field goals and Manhattan moved back into the game. Cahall made a fielder, his first of the game, and was fouled doing so. He converted and the soap-workers went into the lead. This edge was held until with less than two minutes to play of the quarter when the radiomen went on a spree and goals by Vince Profy and Woolley gave them a 4 point lead.

Still there was ten minutes left to play and the soapmen were behind, 34-30. But this was the situation before the Profy team went to pieces. Cahall scored twice in fast order after Mulligan deadlocked the score with a field goal and previous to this Snyder had counted. The Profy team lost all hopes when it broke up its passing system and began to concentrate on long shots.

On these attempts, the Manhattan team always took possession of the sphere and managed to work it into a scoring play and with two minutes left to play, Cahall and Snyder each contributed a pair of goals which made the Profy cause helpless.

Cahall made a total of 17 points for the night, sixteen of these coming in the second half. Joe Roe's total was fifteen points while Snyder trailed behind with 9 points. Again Vince Profy and Joe Dugan divided the scoring honors of the losing aggregation, Profy had 10 points, one more than Dugan.

MANOR A. C. WINS, DEFEATING R. & H. FIVE

Twenty points in the final session gave the Manor A. C. of Morrisville, a 44-37 victory over the Rohm and Hans team in the preliminary game played on the Mutual Aid floor.

It took the champions of the Morrisville circuit a little time to get accustomed to the playing condition of the local floor but when it did it scored at will and nothing the chemical workers could do was able to stop them.

The Maple Beach aggregation held the lead most of the game but faltered in the last quarter when "Bucky" Bucknum and Frankie Wilnot went on a scoring spree.

Bucky scored 12 points for the night, 11 coming in the second half while Wilnot accounted for 16 points with 11 of this total coming in the second half. Shantz and Vanzant were high scorers for the losers.

In the preliminary game Monday night, the Diamond team will meet the Bristol Scholastics.

YARDLEY, Mar. 6.—The Union Signal meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Oswald Penman, on Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. Lucy A. Harper presiding. Mrs. Samuel Allan, Union Signal director, conducted the program. The poems used were taken from different issues of the magazine. Mrs. Jesse Bilbee read, "A Plea;" Mrs. Robert Daugherty, "This Is Our Home;" and "Always At The Gate," by Mrs. Allen.

A quiz on "Why Abstinence Is A Necessary Foundation Stone in Home Making and in Home Keeping," by Bertha Rachel Palmer, was conducted by Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Bilbee.

Miss Elizabeth S. Weeks, Christian Citizenship director, read an article entitled, "Another Explosion," which told of Representative Rankin of Mississippi and his opposition to the amendment on a House Bill to include pawpaw, papayas and pineapples in the various fruit brandies. He said, "If the committee really wants to do something for the American people, let it bring out a bill that squares with honest American principles and put a stop to advertising intoxicating liquor over the radio." Miss Weeks also read "See the Handwriting on the Wall."

The annual mother and daughter luncheon will be omitted this year, as the schools will be in session on Easter Monday.

One new member, Miss Margaret Daugherty, was accepted.

It was voted to have a member of the L. T. L. attend the gold medal contest to be held at the Bucks County W. C. T. U. Institute in Newtown on April 11.

The meeting was closed with the pledge and the Aaronic benediction.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Marjorie Blinn.
